EVENT DESCRIPTION:
The session started at 10:00 Professor Roser Manzanera Ruiz introduced his presentation about “The Internationalization of the CV of Social Sciences Master’s Students” in the framework of the new Online Training Sessions that will be regularly held from April to June and that targets the Tunisian partners of the PACTUM project together with PhD students and general Junior Academic Staff. The program also included a second session held by Professor Guillermo Lopez Rodriguez about “Security and Defense studies from a Mediterranean perspective”. This double session with the colleagues from the University of Granada had the specific aim to provide Tunisian PhD students and junior academic staff with new approaches to the internationalisation of their CV and to the research methodology applied to the topics chosen for the PhD theses. In the first case, Prof. Roser Manzanera Ruiz will focus on the meaning of internationalisation of the CV, on the contents to which this approach is related. The students will thus explore their personal CVs to better understand how to highlight their international experiences and the international exposure of their CVs. During the second session, this entire topic will apply to the Mediterranean context, impacting more the research methods adopted by social sciences students in studies related to the Mediterranean.

For these purposes the students were divided into two groups to exchange their international experiences and to focus on the weaknesses/strengths of their own CV to then have a discussion with the lecturers. During the second sessions the students were asked about the research method adopted for their PhD theses and Prof. Lopez gave them suggestions.

The session ended at 12.00.

The GMeet sessions were also live streamed on PACTUM Facebook page and it's available here:
